TEX RICKARD FAMOUS PROMOTER OF PRIZE FIGHTS DIES SUNDAY IN FLORIDA

Great Sport Showman
Will Be Buried In New York

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 7.—The body of Tex Rickard, who died in Allison Hospital here Sunday, was aboard the "Havana Special," crack north-bound express, today, headed for New York City.

Mrs. Rickard, grief-stricken young widow of the noted promoter, and Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, accompanied the remains, which are to lie in state. Burial will be in Woodlawn Cemetery, New York, Wednesday.

Rickard's infant daughter, Maxine, remained here, unaware of the extent of the loss which had befallen her. The promoter's death occurred at 8:37 a. m. Sunday, due to "overwhelming infection following a severe case of appendicitis" less than twenty-four hours after Rickard had gamely told Dempsey he "had this fight won."

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—The sport world has lost one of its most colorful and predominant figures in George L. (Tex) Rickard, who died early Sunday at Miami Beach, Florida, from infection following an operation for appendicitis.

Today, the body of the noted promoter, whose early life was one of unfettered romance and whose later years brought him unparalleled success as a master showman, was coming back to the scene of his greatest triumphs aboard a fast New York-bound express.

A beloved and incurable romantic, who retained to the high moments when his vision of "million-dollar gates" came true the same enthusiasm which had stood him in good stead in the days of cow-punching, gold-mining and gambling in the far west. He had met death peacefully in his sleep. His end came as a strangely quiet contrast to a life crowded with excitement.

It was the promoter's stubborn fight against an imperative operation for an infected appendix which cost him his life.

When the end came it was Jack Dempsey who sought, after the shamed fashion of men of action in such crises, to console Mrs. Rickard, and who took immediate

WAYNE COUNTY JURY WILL PROBE CHARGE AGAINST KIDNAPERS

Slater Confident State Has Case Against Arnolds

WOOSTER, Jan. 7.—The Wayne County grand jury convened today, but it is not expected to take up consideration of child-stealing charges against five members of the "Nuts" Arnold family of Orville until tomorrow.

The five are held in connection with the disappearance Dec. 27 of 4-year-old Melvin Horst, nephew of Village Marshal Roy Horst.

Ora Slater, Cincinnati detective, who has taken charge of the investigation, said today he felt certain that county authorities had built an excellent circumstantial case.

Evidence which will be presented to the grand jury includes:

The story of Junior Hanna, 9, a playmate of the missing boy's that he heard someone from the Arnold home call Melvin "to give him something."

Discovery of a part of a toy carried by Melvin, near the Arnold home.

Admission of Hanna Senior, a relative of Elias Arnold, that he had attempted to influence his boy to change his story.

The story of a witness that a green automobile drove up to the Arnold home a short time before Melvin disappeared, and drove away shortly afterward.

Anonymous stories of the Arnolds concerning their ill-will toward Marshal Roy Horst.

Analysis of ashes taken from the Arnold furnace, and the reported discovery of some bones brought from the Arnolds today the declaration that no bones of any kind had been thrown into the furnace.

BREWERY PASSES

MIDDLETOWN, O., Jan. 7.—The Sebal Brewing Company, an industry here for almost half a century has ceased to exist as a brewery, even in name. Papers have been issued the Miami Ice and Storage Company whereby it will incorporate and use the plant in the manufacture of ice.

VOLCANO CLAIMS MANY DEATHS IN PUERTO VARAS REPORTS SAY

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 7.—An unreported number of deaths and injuries were indicated today in dispatches from Puerto Varas telling of the eruption of the volcano Calbuco yesterday.

The dispatches said dead and injured were being taken to Puerto Varas, but authorities here were unable to learn the number because of interrupted communications.

The eruption, accompanied by strong earthquakes, began at 3 a. m. Hundreds fled from their homes to find three craters emitting smoke and flames.

The effects of the eruption were felt for miles around.

EIGHTY-EIGHTH ASSEMBLY HAS OPENED SESSION AT COLUMBUS

STATEHOUSE, Columbus, O., Jan. 7.—The eighty-eighth Ohio general assembly was formally called to order at 10 a. m. today.

The senate was convened by Lieut. Governor George C. Haden, who was sworn in by Justice Warren.

The house was called to order by Speaker O. C. Gray of Cuyahoga, who was sworn in by Justice James E. Robinson.

The first order of business was the oath of office which was administered to the new senators by Justice Edward S. Matthews of the supreme court, and to the new representatives by Justice James E. Robinson.

The business of the opening session was largely perfunctory and was devoted to technical organization.

As the session went into session there were expressions of hope that the session would be brief.

Governor-elect Myers V. Cooper said he hoped the session would not last more than two months, or three at the most.

The first real business to be tackled is the proposed emergency appropriation bill carrying about $25,000,000 including $14,000,000 for highway construction and maintenance.

Aside from this, the real work of the assembly will be delayed until after next Monday when Governor-elect Cooper is inaugurated.

Governor-elect Cooper will send his final message to the assembly either tomorrow or Wednesday.

The new legislature is the first in the history of the state to have a senate composed entirely of Republicans.

CHICAGO SUBURB IS RAIDED BY FEDERAL AND COUNTY POLICE

Local Government Is Dispossessed By Authorities

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—Chicago Heights, built by steel and demoralized by alcohol, awoke today to find its police department under fire and its entire local government temporarily dispossessed by a combination of federal and county authorities.

In the most spectacular raid in the history of Illinois, the town of 25,000 inhabitants was virtually sacked by twelve squads of Chicago police and 100 federal agents who swept through its business and residential districts seeking the fountain heads of vice and crime which have made the suburb more notorious than Cicero.

The twenty-five men seized in the raid had been marked for arrest by government agents and by Chicago detectives. They included racketeers and beer chieftains said to be underlings of "Scarface Al" Capone, lord of Chicago's gangland, whose virtual rule of Chicago Heights has existed since the abdication of the notorious Jimmy Torrio, and Oliver J. Ellis, alleged payoff man for a million dollar gambling concession right.

Deputy Commissioner of Police John Stege said the raiders had seized men who would aid in the solution of several of the sixty-two murders which have occurred in Chicago Heights since it became the hub of the alcohol war.

Armed squads patrolled every street. Local police officers were taken into custody on their beats. Twenty homes were entered by force and the equipment of guns, ammunition and gangster paraphernalia seized.

Warrants, based on evidence secured over a month's investigation by federal agents, were distributed and the procession started for its first objective—the Chicago Heights police station.

There, Deputy Commissioner Stege demanded the keys for the city hall and the jail. He ordered out of the jail three women and two men, remarking: "We'll need all the room we have in a few minutes."

Ellis confessed that $400,000 in cancelled checks which were placed before him represented slot machine profits for fourteen months. He implicated several others, some of whom, agents said, might lead the investigation into Chicago's municipal buildings.

LONDON, Jan. 7.—King George passed a "fair night," according to his physicians who visited him this morning.

OHIO DAIRY FARMER AND WIFE BELIEVED KILLED BY LABORER

Small Child Finds Bodies
Of Parents; Auto Stolen.

CANTON, O., Jan. 7.—A youth known only as Edward, was sought today in connection with the murder of John Oser, 25, Canal Fulton dairy farmer, and his wife, Bertha, 26.

The Osers were murdered some time Saturday night but their bodies were not discovered until yesterday.

Oser had been shot to death and his wife, clad only in a night gown, was found lying near the Oser garage. Her head had been crushed with rocks and she had been shot.

The boy, known as Edward, was hired by Oser a few days ago. He has not been seen since Saturday and the Oser's new automobile had disappeared.

The double murder was discovered by the couple's son, Harold, 9, who went in search of his parents yesterday when he awoke and found them missing.

The boy went to the milk house where he discovered his father. He mounted a pony which his father recently gave him and rode to the home of neighbors.

"My daddy is dead and I can't find mother," the frantic boy told William Edwards, a neighbor.

Edwards immediately notified Sheriff Edward Gibson and then went to the Oser home where he found Oser and his wife.

No one knows where the youth, Edward, came from nor does anyone know his full name.

Mrs. Oser's body had been exposed so long that it was frozen to the ground.

Oser had been shot in the temple.

The Oser's also were the parents of a year old boy.

The boy, Harold, was grief-stricken. He said that upon arising and finding his father and mother absent, he dressed and went to the milk house.

He found his father stretched across the floor, a bullet hole in his head.

He returned to the house and found his father's .22 caliber rifle, the stock splintered. The kitchen was in disorder and there was a bullet hole in the bedroom window.

Sheriff Gibson reconstructed the story of the double killing as follows:

The slayer, standing against a tree a few feet from the milk house and using Oser's rifle, took steady aim and fired as the dairyman filled milk cans for his Sunday delivery.

The bullet crashed through the window and entered Oser's head.

Rain was falling and the incident noise apparently muffled the sound of the shot.

Mrs. Oser was in the house 200 feet away.

Creeping to the house the killer fired through the bedroom window but missed Mrs. Oser. Then he battered down the kitchen door and attacked the woman.

The slayer apparently shot Mrs. Oser as she lay unconscious. He then dragged her body to the spot behind the garage and beat in her head with rocks.

The slayer then took the Osers' new car and fled.

Neighbors and police can advance no motive for the murders, except, perhaps, that of automobile theft. It has not been determined whether Mrs. Oser was attacked.

Sheriff Gibson believes the slayer robbed Oser of between $200 and $400 which Oser was in the habit of carrying.

A woman at Bowdell, near Canal Fulton, told Gibson she saw a man believed by her to have been Oser's young hired hand, stop at a filling station with Oser's auto. He asked the road to Youngstown. The youth appeared to be a friendly boy, neighbors said, and had made a hit with Harold to whom he told today's story.

Oser himself had told his mother, Mrs. John Oser, that the youth was "the best hired man I ever had," according to Sheriff Gibson.

INTENSE COLD WAVE GRIPS MIDDLE WEST

Temperatures Hover Near Zero Through Ohio, Kentucky And West Virginia; Southwestern States Also Suffer.

Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia were in the grip of the most intense cold wave of the winter today.

Temperatures in the Great Lakes area hovered near zero while other regions felt an almost equally icy grip.

Heavy winds buffeted the three states over the weekend, causing considerable damage.

The frigid wave struck the three states Saturday night when drenching rains gave way to hail storms, then to snow.

The winds whipped the snow into high drifts up around the Michigan lake line but the precipitation elsewhere was light.

Motorists encountered their annual troubles—those of frozen machines—and in some cities icy pavement made the movement of traffic highly precarious.

Measures for relief for the poor were under consideration in many cities today. The cold wave was more severe than anticipated and intense suffering was reported.

Clear skies prevailed generally today but the cold continued and no immediate break was in sight.

Chicago and vicinity reported below zero temperatures.

CHICAGO, Jan. 7.—A record cold wave with temperatures as low as zero gripped the southwest today.

At least fifteen deaths were attributed to the cold wave in the middle and southwest.

LEADER OF SENATE PROPHESIES PENCE LAW TO BE REPEALED

Aigler Denies He Will Oppose Move Against Law.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 7.—Senator Allen G. Aigler, floor leader of the senate, announced today that he is in favor of the repeal of the Pence law. He also predicted it will be repealed.

The law permits public utilities to collect increased rates under bond before they are approved by the utilities commission.

Senator Aigler said he gave out his statement in view of general comments that because of family interests in utilities properties he would oppose repeal of the law as advocated by Governor-elect Cooper.

"In order that there may be no doubt about my attitude in regard to this proposed repeal I have drawn up a statement," Senator Aigler said.

The statement follows in part: "There has been considerable speculation as to the attitude of the legislature regarding the repeal of the Pence law. I have made no effort to poll the members of the general assembly but believe a majority of both branches of the legislature will vote for the repeal of the Pence law. I shall vote for the repeal."

Aigler said he favors a sufficient appropriation to permit the utilities commission to hire an adequate force to speed up procedure in rate cases.

MAY ELIMINATE FIRE MARSHAL

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 7.—The abolition of the state fire marshal's office will be recommended to the 88th general assembly, the joint legislative committee on economy in public service announced today.

The functions now performed through the office should be delegated to other departments, the committee declared.

The department of health would supervise the hotel and restaurant inspection, while detection of arson and all fire investigations would be carried on by the proposed department of public safety.

The committee pointed out that the offices of fire marshal and prohibition commissioner are the only state branches not operating under civil service.

The fire marshal's office was established in 1900 at the request of fire insurance companies, who agreed to a tax for its support. The committee recommends the continuation of the tax, stating that the duties of the office would be performed even more efficiently under the new plan.

DEATH CLAIMS DUKE NICHOLAS, LAST OF RUSSIAN ROYALTY

Hopes Of Czarists Fall
As Romanoff Leader Dies.

ANTIBES, France, Jan. 7.—Rejoicing in the full knowledge of an officer of the Caucasian Cossacks, the body of Grand Duke Nicholas, second cousin of the late czar, was placed today upon a splendid bier to lie in state until the funeral tomorrow.

The last magnificent gesture of royalty, back to whose effluence Nicholas had hoped to lead the Romanoffs, is his in death. The hopes of all czarist exiles, for resurrection of the monarchy, lie here in the red velvet draped room, lighted only by flickering candles.

Tomorrow the body will be transported to the Russian cathedral at Cannes for the funeral service.

The grand duke's death occurred Saturday at 9:45 p. m. from two heart attacks which came within a few hours. He had but recently deserted his little villa outside of Paris to go to the Riviera seeking a milder winter.

Pneumonia caused him to be stricken here and he had apparently waged a successful battle toward recovery.

Saturday afternoon he seemed much stronger and issued a proclamation for the Russian Christmas today. Two hours later the first heart attack struck him but the dictators aided him in what appeared to be a recovery.

The second attack was at 9 p. m. The Archimandrite Theodosius recited the death prayer as life ebbed away.

PARIS, Jan. 7.—The Soviet embassy, commenting on the death of Grand Duke Nicholas, issued a statement to the United Press in which it was declared that "the last vestiges of Russian monarchy have been removed."

"The passing of Nicholas must be a cruel blow to the leaders of the old regime, who have tried all means of restoring the Romanoff throne," the statement said. "Differences existing between the monarchist factions of the refugees in Europe make it all the more difficult to choose a substitute pretender."

JURY RETURNS FIRST DEGREE MURDER AND RECOMMENDS MERCY

Defense Counsel To Ask
New Trial; Prisoner
Stoical

Gilbert Cooper, 49, laborer, near Cedarville, will serve the remainder of his life in Ohio State Penitentiary without hope of pardon, providing the decree of the jury which tried him for the murder of Caleb Hitchcock, 23, Cedarville, is carried out.

The jury of seven men and five women, after wrangling for five and one-half hours, found him guilty of the state's charge of first degree murder but with a recommendation for mercy. The verdict was returned at 1:30 p. m. Saturday, exactly six weeks almost to the hour after the shooting occurred on the Jesse Townsley farm near Cedarville November 24.

The report of the jurors was drama at its peak. A death-like silence spread over the assembled crowd as the jury filed into the box. Hair-trigger suspense. Every face was white. Cooper was the exception. He alone of all the crowd appeared as calm as the clerk intoned the solemn words that condemned him to a life sentence in the penitentiary without expectation of pardon.

Cooper's wife was also in the court room when the jury report was read. Neither she nor her husband betrayed any emotion. The only sentence uttered by Cooper was when he turned to his attorney and said "Do what you can for me."

Immediately after the verdict was read, Attorney Frank L. Johnson, counsel for Cooper, announced that a motion for a new trial would be filed Monday. Attorney Johnson said he would seek a new trial on the grounds the verdict was excessive; that it was a higher degree than the evidence justified.

Prosecutor J. Carl Marshall expressed himself as well satisfied with the verdict. Although urging that the jury perform its duty, the prosecutor did not make a plea to the jury for the death penalty.

The jury was given the case at 11:15 a. m. Saturday. Testimony of both sides was completed Friday and arguments to the jury were made Saturday morning.

Cooper was convicted of slaying young Hitchcock, November 24, as a result of an argument over a trap line which Hitchcock is said to have placed along the north fork of Massie's Creek on the Jesse Townsley farm near Cedarville.

Sentence is not expected to be passed upon Cooper by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy until he has ruled on the motion for a new trial expected to be filed by Attorney Johnson.

FAMOUS PROMOTER
OF PRIZE FIGHT DIES
SUNDAY IN FLORIDA

charge of the funeral arrangements and of the business affairs which had taken Rickard to Florida this winter.

After brief services in a Catholic chapel at Miami Beach, the body was placed aboard the train shortly before midnight, accompanied by Mrs. Rickard, Dempsey, and Walter Fields, an old friend and trusted employee of the late promoter.

The train is due in New York city at 10:19 a. m. tomorrow, and the remains will lie in state at a mortuary on Broadway Tuesday afternoon and night.

The greatest tribute paid to Rickard today was the difficulty men had in even suggesting his possible successor.

Madison Square Garden, monument to his genius as a promoter, was wrapped in gloom, for "the boss," whose office door stood ever open, was loved truly by those in that dominant sports organization, the crowning achievement of his career. To the very end, however, when, at the age of fifty-nine, Tex had made several millions, he retained that same disarming naivete which carried him through the turbulent days when the west was young and he fought hand-to-hand with trouble-makers in his Nevada gambling place.

An early life given over to the spontaneity of quick gun play, prospecting in the earth for gold and playing for it over the green clothed gambling tables have Rickard a zest for adventure which culminated in exploits of daring showmanship. But at the end, men thought of him as a vigorous, bronzed man, seemingly in the prime of life, whose chief interest were his young wife and his baby daughter, Maxine.

It was something of the gambling spirit which cost Tex another chance at life, for he repeatedly put off the operation for appendicitis which surgeons insisted was necessary.

On New Year's Day, Tex yielded to an overpowering attack and an operation followed at the Allison Hospital at Miami Beach. There he seemed to rally, and even after a relapse late Friday he was able to smile and take the hand of his friend, Dempsey, and say, firmly: "Jack, I've not this fight won."

But he hadn't.

He died in his sleep Sunday. Dempsey entered the death chamber too late for a final word with Tex. Mrs. Rickard, bearing up bravely under the ordeal, stood at the bedside when the doctor said quietly that the end had come. In the brilliant morning sunshine, baby Maxine, the promoter's daughter, played on the sandy beach, unaware of the tragedy.

"I have lost the best pal a man ever had," said Dempsey, his broad shoulders drooping, after returning from escorting Mrs. Rickard to her home.

In the search for a successor to Tex's place as leader in promoting boxing, Dempsey will not be overlooked.

The confusion attendant upon Rickard's passing is incalculable, although behind the promoter was the wealth of millions and on his staff were capable assistants. His fertile mind was a card-index of his numerous projects; he was in truth the main spring of Madison Square Garden Corporation and its branching ventures.

Only recently, a new Madison Square Garden opened in Boston, its backers borrowing from Rickard his sponsorship as builders seek royalty to lay cornerstones.

Dempsey, already bound in part by necessity as well as friendship, might step in, but it is doubtful if conflicting factions in Madison Square Garden would unite behind the former champion.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 7.—Tex Rickard's 81-year-old mother grieved today over the death of the son who was "always my dearest treasure."

Mrs. L. J. Adams, the promoter's mother, heard the news of her son's death with complete resignation. Foremost in her mind was the thought that she did not reach his bedside during his last hours.

Time will not permit the mother and Rickard's sister, Mrs. Carlin, to attend the funeral, the sister said.

WHERE THE HOOVERS MAY SOJOURN

When President-elect Herbert Hoover returns from South America in January, he plans to spend a few weeks in Florida before going to Washington. Among other places, he has been invited to the home of J. C. Penny, at top, located on Belle Isle, between Miami and Miami Beach, and to the estate of Walter P. Fuller at St. Petersburg, the southern exposure of which is shown below, which faces on the Gulf of Mexico.

How To Escape
FLU

1 Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most apt to be; crowded cars, public meeting places, warm, stuffy rooms.

2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers. Breath through the nose.

3 Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrus fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take every precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.

4 Above all, avoid catching cold. Any cold may be the forerunner of flu. Take Bayer Aspirin at the first sign of a cold and you can ward it off. Gargle with Bayer Aspirin at first sign of sore throat as this will remove the infection.

5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor.

FAMOUS PROMOTER
OF PRIZE FIGHT DIES

charge of the funeral arrangements and of the business affairs which had taken Rickard to Florida. After brief services in a Catholic chapel at Miami Beach, the body was placed aboard the train shortly before midnight, accompanied by Mrs. Rickard, Dempsey and Walter Fields, an old friend and trusted employee of the late promoter.

The train is due in New York city at 10:19 a. m. tomorrow, and the remains will lie in state at a mortuary on Broadway Tuesday afternoon and night.

The greatest tribute paid to Rickard today was the difficulty men had in even suggesting his possible successor.

Madison Square Garden, monument to his genius as a promoter, was wrapped in gloom, for "the boss," whose office door stood ever open, was loved truly by those in that dominant sports organization, the crowning achievement of his career. To the very end, however, when, at the age of fifty-nine, Tex had made several millions, he retained that same disarming natvete which carried him through the turbulent days when the west was young and he fought hand-to-hand with trouble-makers in his Nevada gambling place.

An early life given over to the spontaneity of quick gun play, prospecting in the earth for gold and playing for it over the green clothed gambling tables gave Rickard a zest for adventure which culminated in exploits of daring showmanship. But at the end, men thought of him as a vigorous, bronzed man, seemingly in the prime of life, whose chief interest were his young wife and his baby daughter, Maxine.

It was something of the gambling spirit which cost Tex another chance at life, for he repeatedly put off the operation for appendicitis which surgeons insisted was necessary.

On New Year's Day, Tex yielded to an overpowering attack and an operation followed at the Allison Hospital at Miami Beach. There he seemed to rally, and even after a relapse late Friday he was able to smile and take the hand of his friend, Dempsey, and say, firmly: "Jack, I've got this fight won."

But he hadn't.

He died in his sleep Sunday.

Dempsey entered the death chamber too late for a final word with Tex. Mrs. Rickard, bearing up bravely under the ordeal, stood at the bedside when the doctor said quietly that the end had come. In the brilliant morning sunshine, baby Maxine, the promoter's daughter, played on the sandy beach, unaware of the tragedy.

"I have lost the best pal a man ever had," said Dempsey, his broad shoulders drooping, after returning from escorting Mrs. Rickard to her home.

In the search for a successor to Tex's place as leader in promoting boxing, Dempsey will not be overlooked.

The confusion attendant upon Rickard's passing is incalculable, although behind the promoter was the wealth of millionaires and on his staff were capable assistants. His fertile mind was a card-index of his numerous projects; he was in truth the main spring of Madison Square Garden Corporation and its branching ventures.

Only recently, a new Madison Square Garden opened in Boston, its backers borrowing from Rickard his sponsorship as builders seek royalty to lay cornerstones.

Dempsey, already bound in partnership as well as friendship, might step in, but it is doubtful if conflicting factions in Madison Square Garden would unite behind the former champion.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 7.—Tex Rickard's 81-year-old mother grieved today over the death of the son who was "always my dearest treasure."

Mrs. L. J. Adams, the promoter's mother, heard the news of her son's death with complete resignation. Foremost in her mind was the thought that she did not reach his bedside during his last hours.

Time will not permit the mother and Rickard's sister, Mrs. Carlin, to attend the funeral, the sister said.

WHERE THE HOOVERS MAY SOJOURN

When President-elect Herbert Hoover returns from South America in January, he plans to spend a few weeks in Florida before going to Washington. Among other places, he has been invited to the home of J. C. Penny, at top, located on Belle Isle, between Miami and Miami Beach, and to the estate of Walter P. Fuller at St. Petersburg, the southern exposure of which is shown below, which faces on the Gulf of Mexico.

How To Escape
FLU

1 Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most apt to be; crowded cars, public meeting places, warm, stuffy rooms.

2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers. Breathe through the nose.

3 Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrus fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take every precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.

4 Above all, avoid catching cold. Any cold may be the forerunner of flu. Take Bayer Aspirin at the first sign of a cold and you can ward it off. Gargle with Bayer Aspirin at first sign of sore throat as this will remove the infection.

5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor.

RIGHT OF CONGRESS TO PROBE SINCLAIR AFFAIRS IS ARGUED

Supreme Court Will Pass On Committee Powers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The right of congressional committees to delve into what Harry F. Sinclair, the oil magnate, regarded as his own private business, will be argued before the U. S. Supreme Court today or tomorrow.

Arguments will be held on this point and several other important and highly technical questions of congressional power, on Sinclair's appeal from his three-month jail sentence for contempt of the senate, imposed two years ago in District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Sinclair appealed to the District Court of Appeals, arguing that the senate Teapot Dome committee's questions, concerning his lease on Teapot Dome, put to him in March, 1924, were illegal, and that his refusal to answer were justified. The appellate court, after considering the case for six months, certified to the supreme court five legal questions upon which it will decide the appeal.

Martin W. Littleton and George P. Hoover will represent Sinclair. Littleton is the attorney who advised Sinclair not to answer the committee's questions, which came as a climax in the first famous Teapot Dome inquiry. The justice department, probably through Solicitor-general Mitchell, will oppose Sinclair.

The questions will be answered probably after a few weeks' consideration by the supreme court, after which the Court of Appeals will hand down its judgment. If adverse to Sinclair, he may appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court from that judgment, so that if he loses on all points it will be at least a year before he is required to go to jail. On the other hand, if Sinclair wins on any of the five points, the sentence may be reversed, and he will go free.

The question involved, the answers to which will create important precedents for the courts and congress, are in effect as follows:

1. May a witness in these circumstances lawfully refuse to answer questions which call for the disclosure of his private affairs?

2. May such a witness refuse to answer questions on matters wherein relief or redress could be had only by judicial proceeding?

3. May such a witness be justified in refusing to answer such questions when it appears that the inquiry, though authorized in aid of legislation, is directed to matters which have been referred to the courts by congress, and in which the witness is a defendant?

4. Was the question of the pertinency of the questions a mixed question of law and fact, to be decided by the jury which tried the case of Sinclair, or whether it was a question of law for the judge to decide? (In this case the judge decided the questions were pertinent.)

5. May such a witness, alleged to be a party to a conspiracy to defraud the government, refuse to answer questions insofar as they involve his connection with the conspiracy which form the basis of the conspiracy proceeding?

The committee's questions were in connection with Sinclair's knowledge of some of the dealings which led up to his lease of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve from Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior, in 1922. On several previous appearances, Sinclair had answered all the committee's questions.

JAIL POPULATION DECREASES IN YEAR

Population of the Greene County Jail during the year 1928 is placed at 289, a decrease of twenty-four from the preceding year.

During the first two years term of Sheriff Olmstead, a total of 584 prisoners were incarcerated in the county jail, indicating a considerable increase over recent years.

It is pointed out that during the four years preceding 1927, only 814 prisoners were cared for at the jail.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE PLANNED BY LEGION AT SUNDAY MEETING

Plans to complete district organization for a Legion membership drive were outlined at a meeting of American Legion officers, membership committees and Legionnaires of Greene, Clark, Warren and Montgomery Counties at the Court House here Sunday afternoon.

Ohio Legion posts were recently divided into districts for the purpose of staging a more effective state-wide campaign to obtain new members.

Each of the ten or more Legion posts in the district comprising these four counties will appoint on a committee, which will meet at Fairport, probably at the O. R. C. Club, January 19.

Plans for a County Banquet for Legionnaires at post headquarters of Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, American Legion, in the basement of the Court House the night of January 22, are also being perfected. Greene County is represented by five Legion posts, two of which are inactive. The banquet would be open to the public and those interested would be able to purchase tickets for 50 cents.

It is hoped to wind up the intensive membership early in February.

QUESTION MARK IS REMAINING ALOFT

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Jan. 7.—Clinging always within gliding distance of the Metropolitan airport at Van Nuys, the army monoplane Question Mark was still adding laurels to its world's sustained flight record for all types of aircraft today as it sailed toward its second week in the air.

The motors of the ship apparently were functioning well again but landing orders and the command to remain within easy reach of the home base were given indicating the crew fears engine failure momentarily.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO FLU

Coughs from Flu May Weaken Your System and Lead to Serious Trouble

You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion may help you avoid flu, but is not sold as a flu remedy. If you have fever, or think you may have the flu, see your doctor immediately. (adv.)

BUREAU MOVES UP
The farm bureau of Ohio moved from sixth to fifth rank among the thirty-seven states affiliated with the American Farm Bureau Federation, Ohioans attending the meeting reported on their return.

The Ohio membership in the organization is surpassed only by the states of Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, and New York, the membership increasing in 1928 in Ohio placing it above California.

The total gain in Ohio memberships of the organization this year has passed the 5,000 mark, says a report received by the Greene County Farm Bureau from J. R. Allgier, organization director of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

Exchanging a day with workers of each county, Shelby and Logan County farm bureaus recently added forty-one and eighty-one members respectively to past membership. Fayette County farm bureau still leads all Ohio counties with a membership of more than 900.

The 1930 sessions of the American Institute of Co-operation will be held on the campus of Ohio State University in the summer of 1930, says a report received by the Greene County Farm Bureau from L. B. Palmer, president of the

THREE PERISH WHEN STOVE EXPLODES

PORT CLINTON, O., Jan. 7.—Joint funeral services were being arranged today for a mother and her two children who were killed when a stove exploded at their home at Plastered, near here, Saturday.

The victims were: Mrs. Eva Cradic, 27, the mother; Donald, 3; and Coda, 9 months, her children. They were burned when Mrs. Cradic sought to revive a fire in the kitchen stove with oil.

With her clothing ignited by a shower of flaming oil and coals, Mrs. Cradic, without regard for her own life, ran to a bedroom to rescue her children.

Despite her heroic efforts, Mrs. Cradic, with her two children clasped to her flaming body, collapsed when her escape was cut off by the flames.

Arle Cradic, her brother-in-law, next door, attracted by the screams of the children, succeeded in carrying the three out through a window. The three died later at Memorial Hospital, Fremont.

RIGHT OF CONGRESS TO PROBE SINCLAIR AFFAIRS IS ARGUED

Supreme Court Will Pass On Committee Powers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The right of congressional committees to delve into what Harry F. Sinclair, the oil magnate, regarded as his own private business, will be argued before the U. S. Supreme Court today or tomorrow.

Arguments will be held on this point and several other important and hitherto undecided questions of congressional power, on Sinclair's appeal from his three-month jail sentence for contempt of the senate, imposed two years ago in District of Columbia Supreme Court.

Sinclair appealed to the District Court of Appeals, arguing that the senate Teapot Dome committee's questions, concerning his lease on Teapot Dome, put to him in March, 1921, were illegal, and that his refusal to answer were justified.

The appellate court, after considering the case for six months, certified to the supreme court five legal questions upon which it will decide the appeal.

Martin W. Littleton and George P. Hoover will represent Sinclair. Littleton is the attorney who advised Sinclair not to answer the committee's questions, which came as a climax in the first famous Teapot Dome inquiry. The justice department, probably through Solicitor-general Mitchell, will oppose Sinclair.

The questions will be answered probably after a few weeks consideration by the supreme court, which the Court of Appeals will hand down its judgment. If adverse to Sinclair, he may appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court from that judgment, so that if he loses on all points it will be at least a year before he is required to go to jail. On the other hand, if Sinclair wins on any of the five points, the sentence may be reversed, and he will go free.

The questions involved, the answers to which will create important precedents for the courts and congress, are in effect as follows:

1. May a witness in these circumstances lawfully refuse to answer questions which call for the disclosure of his private affairs?

2. May such a witness refuse to answer questions on matters wherein he or she is a defendant?

3. May such a witness be justified in refusing to answer such questions when it appears that the inquiry, though authorized in aid of legislation, is directed to matters which have been referred to the courts by congress, and in which the witness is a defendant?

4. Was the question of the pertinency of the questions a mixed question of law and fact, to be decided by the jury which tried the case of Sinclair, or whether it was a question of law for the judge to decide? (In this case the judge decided the questions were pertinent.)

5. May such a witness, alleged to be a party to a conspiracy to defraud the government, refuse to answer questions insofar as they involve his connection with the conspiracy which form the basis of the conspiracy proceeding?

The committee's questions were in connection with Sinclair's knowledge of some of the dealings which led up to his lease of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve from Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior, in 1922. On several previous appearances, Sinclair had answered all the committee's questions.

Population of the Greene County Jail during the year 1928 is placed at 280, a decrease of twenty-four from the preceding year.

During the last two-year term of Sheriff Oliver Tate, a total of 584 prisoners were incarcerated in the county jail, indicating a considerable increase over recent years.

It is pointed out that during the four years preceding 1927, only 814 prisoners were cared for at the jail.

THE OLD HOME TOWN

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE PLANNED BY LEGION AT SUNDAY MEETING

Plans to complete district organization for a Legion membership drive were outlined at a meeting of American Legion officers, membership committee and Legionnaires of Greene, Clark, Warren and Montgomery Counties at the Court House here Sunday afternoon.

Ohio Legion posts were recently divided into districts for the purpose of staging a more effective state-wide campaign to obtain new members.

Each of the ten or more Legion posts in the district comprising these four counties will appoint a committee, which will meet at Fairview, probably at the O. E. C. Club, January 19.

Plans for a County Banquet for Legionnaires at post headquarters of Joseph P. Faddy Post, No. 95, American Legion, in the basement of the Court House the night of January 22, are also being perfected.

Greene County is represented by five Legion posts, two of which are inactive. The banquet would be open to the public and those interested would be able to purchase tickets for 50 cents.

It is hoped to wind up the intensive membership drive early in February.

BUREAU MOVES UP
The farm bureau of Ohio moved from sixth to fifth rank among the thirty-seven states affiliated with the American Farm Bureau Federation, Ohioans attending the meeting reported on their return.

The Ohio membership in the organization is surpassed only by the states of Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, and New York, the membership increasing in 1928 in Ohio placing it above California.

The total gain in Ohio memberships of the organization this year has passed the 5,000 mark, says a report received by the Greene County Farm Bureau from J. R. Allgayer, organization director of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

Exchanging a day with workers of each county, Shelby and Logan County farm bureaus recently added forty-one and eighty-one members respectively to past membership. Fayette County farm bureau still leads all Ohio counties with a membership of more than 900.

The 1930 sessions of the American Institute of Co-operation will be held on the campus of Ohio State University in the summer of 1930, says a report received by the Greene County Farm Bureau from L. B. Palmer, president of the

COLD MAY DEVELOP INTO FLU

Coughs from Flu May Weaken Your System and Lead to Serious Trouble

You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified cresote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs cresote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to cresote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the cresote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion may help you avoid flu, but is not sold as a flu remedy. If you have fever, or think you may have the flu, see your doctor immediately. (adv.)

THREE PERISH WHEN STOVE EXPLODES

PORT CLINTON, O., Jan. 7.—Joint funeral services were being arranged today for a mother and her two children who were killed by a stove blast at their home at Plastered, near here, Saturday.

The victims were: Mrs. Eva Cradic, 27, the mother; Donald, 3, and Coda, 9 months, her children. They were burned when Mrs. Cradic sought to revive a fire in the kitchen stove with oil.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE GREAT PROCLAMATION—Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world. Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold thy salvation cometh.—Isaiah 62:11.

NEW USE FOR PHOTOGRAPHY

Millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money are spent yearly for carrying on governmental routine. Economics and labor saving have been effected, from time to time through the innovation of bookkeeping and tabulating machines and more efficient filing systems and calculators.

The most recent improvement over old methods is the new system of copying and recording documents by photography. This is now done in a number of states and saves a tremendous amount of time, money and labor, as well as guaranteeing a degree of accuracy impossible with any system of copying by human means.

"This method is no longer in the experimental stage," says the Tax Digest. "It has been tried and found to meet every test. It is superior to any other method that has, as yet, been invented. It is of proven permanency, of demonstrated effectiveness . It is the most economical method. And it is of absolute accuracy."

The copying of documents may seem a small thing, but it is an important duty of government and one that costs a great deal of money. It is through such economies as this that much can be done to raise governmental efficiency and lower the tax rate.

CONVINCING PROOF

No better proof of the essential soundness of the American economic system could be found than the amicability today existing between labor and capital.

At the present time many of the great foreign powers are in the throes of unrest. The Russian Soviet experiment has yet to be worked out satisfactorily and has been chiefly distinguished by conflicts between different Communist factions. England, Austria, Germany and France have labor problems. Government ownership of basic industries has not met the demands of workers, and has damaged national prosperity.

In comparison, the United States stands out, with unparalleled prosperity and industrial satisfaction. Except for coal, major American industries have been free from strikes for years and even minor disputes between employees and employers have been rare.

With growth in wages in our country, millions of workers are purchasing stock in industries which furnish them employment. They will be the capitalists of tomorrow.

Capital has made our prosperity and labor has benefited. And the imported panaceas are found, when brought to America, to be sadly lacking in the qualities that would endear them to our individualistic and independent-thinking citizens.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

POLITICS

The thing that is the matter with politics is not politics, but politicians. And the thing that is the matter with politicians is that too often they are not good men. Too often they are tricky, disloyal, dishonest. It has long been said that the fundamental rule of politics is loyalty—loyalty to your friends. And yet there is probably more disloyalty among politicians than among men in other lines of human endeavor. The professional politician wants most of all to win what he is after. The methods by which he wins are frequently, with him, a minor consideration. With general indifference on one side and the disposition of politicians to be tricky, on the other, the man who really wants to serve the public in an intelligent, honest and high-minded way has a nearly impassable road to travel.

THE TEST

The test of an executive is not his ability to do things, but his ability to attract men and hold men in his organization who know how to do things. Not to be able to pick good men and to fail to keep them happy after they are picked are fatal defects in the character of an executive.

IT'S NOT NEGLECT

A certain weekly newspaper, which at one time attained wide circulation, used to carry at the bottom of the first page the line: "Chronicle of neglected truth." The fact is that truth is not so much the subject of mere neglect as it is a matter of deliberate disregard. There are plenty of books, magazines and newspapers which set forth the truth. There are uncounted thousands who have access to sound reading matter and sound information. But we are still so much creatures of like and dislike, creatures of temperament and instinct, that we prefer avoiding the truth and living in a fools' paradise of our own. We desire to believe what we desire to believe, rather than what we should know and must know to be a fact.

STOCK AND MACHINES

More than three times as much cultivated crop land is used for growing feed for farm animals as is used for producing crops for human consumption. As more power driven machinery comes into use that situation will be changed. Driving through the country one wonders how the people are fed when there are so many thousands of acres of uncultivated land on both sides of the road. Hungry city folks can take comfort from the fact, however, that with new and improved methods and more intensive farming, the agriculturist has learned how to produce far more per acre than he used to. There is food enough. The main question now is to see that the producer gets a larger part of the high price that the consumer has to pay. Somewhere along the line the non-producer gets too much.

AS TO CONGRESS

It is usual to find about 60 per cent of the members of congress are lawyers. That may or may not be a desirable situation. A man may be long on the law and short on common sense. He may be long on the law and short on idealistic desire to serve the public by making a real contribution to his times.

The Diary
of a
New Yorker

By WALTER WINCHELL

NEW YORK. — We told Will Rogers that they were saying of him: "Give Will Rogers enough rope and he'll hang anybody."

To which he responded: "Somebody asked me how I get away with kidding big men. I replied that the query answered itself. For I kid only BIG men."

Rogers added that there was little difference between himself and some politicians. "They kid New York," he chirped, "and I kid America."

Then, when some one brought up the subject of how one of the papers he's in, the New York Times, and others, had spanked his wrist because in a radio address he "neglected to say that he wasn't Mr. Coolidge," Rogers mused: "Mr. Coolidge's pretty tough for us comedians when we have editorial competition."

HER B'WAY. NOT MINE

Another spurious and hammy version of Broadway is provided at the George M. Cohan theater by George Leffler. It is called "One Way Street" because in the finale a villain is told that he is on a one-way street from which there is no return. The piece is a blackball to crush the sinners of "the street that whips the universe," and it rebukes the dope traffickers, the blackjacketeers, the naughty ladies of the cabarets, and the rest of us who frequent the Main Stem.

It was written and hastily prepared, one suspects, to quench the thirsts of those who wallowed in the late Mr. Rothstein's activities, but it is better described as another form of anesthetic.

AND JOHN E. HAZZARD

The musical version of John Kendrick Bangs' celebrated satire, "The Houseboat on the Styx," is being given at the Liberty theater. The night I went a friendly attendance greeted it with no little appreciation. It contains, among other things, some delightful singers and dancers, several settings, a grand comedian named John E. Hazzard, and a robust enough melody or two, but it is only intermittently diverting.

If you were in vaudeville, you had to pay them to help fill their theaters. Millions in revenue enrich the managers annually.

If you are just beginning to show the perpendicular lines that are soon going to develop into sunken hollows and criss-cross lines—a three-step treatment will be sufficient to catch the condition "by the heels," correcting the harm that exists and preventing further damage. If, however, the lines have progressed to a point of unattractiveness, you had better count on four or five steps to neck beauty.

Lewis E. Gensler, who put on "one of those" musical shows, will tell you that the trouble with this year's theatrical season is that the producers did their Christmas Flopping Early.

Hiram S. Brown, the new head of the Radio-Orpheum Circuit, did a grand thing for the vaudeville actor one day recently when he abolished the Vaudeville Collection Agency.

Take it from one who Always Wondered How They Got Away With It, the vaudeville collection agency was an abominable thing of which the managers had good reason to be ashamed.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

WASHINGTON — Stiff politicians by the hundreds — and thousands — sift and sift and finally only the statesmen — if any — will be left.

Their number—among politicians—is pitifully small. One of them—Theodore E. Burton of Ohio—said goodbye to the house of representatives the other day and returned to the United States senate, after a lapse of a dozen years.

About two senators of his own magnitude were there to greet him—Jim Reed of Missouri, soon to retire; "Uncle George" Norris of Nebraska.

A representative trio, at that! Burton—as orthodox a Republican as the father of the creed, Alexander Hamilton himself. Reed!—a Democrat of a type so genuine as to be almost extinct. Norris!—too independent to "stand hitched" even in the senate's independent bloc.

The assertion that these three show, head and shoulders, above the ruck of their fellow senators is bound to be disputed — of course.

Jim Reed? His term will end March 4 and he will go back into private life defeated—not at the polls but in all his dearest ambitions—but defeated like a Napoleon. The senate will not be the same without him. His worst enemy will agree to that. George Norris? A "bolter" who makes that term, hated of politicians, respected even among themselves — because Senator Norris is the bolter—just as the seat of honor at the table is whatever seat "the Macgregor" may happen to occupy.

Senator Burton stands out by virtue of sheer knowledge. There is so much blurring in congress—and Senator Burton so patently knows precisely what he is talking about—all the time. He is not ostentatiously wise. It simply is a fact.

A man of 77 today, he first came to congress 40 years ago. Forty years can be wasted, to be sure. Believe me, Senator Burton did not waste them. In his case, a high order of ability, to begin with plus those four decades of experience, equal a statesman of the first class.

Theodore E. Burton is supposed to be slated to figure as senate spokesman for Herbert Hoover in the White House.

It is a compliment to Mr. Hoover's judgment if the report is true.

It sounds likely, besides. Senator Burton was an original Hoover man in Ohio. Ohio appeared to be a very doubtful state for Mr. Hoover at that time. Numerically, the odds there were all against him, but Theodore E. Burton was bigger than all sorts of odds combined.

Mr. Hoover will need an exceptional yable senate spokesman.

Several senators are ambitious to direct the coming administration in the way it should go. Senator Watson, as majority leader, if he be chosen to fill the post—Senator Borah, who thinks he nominated the Californian — Senator Moses, who considers that he elected him—these are a few.

It is no strain on the imagination to envisage the mentally, physically massive old Ohioan calmly, passionlessly tramping over this crowd of younglings—with effortless but elephantine Why not? He forgets more in

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Special Treatment for the Scrawny Neck

When the neck begins to develop lines and wrinkles, there is only one thing for you to do, and that is—get to work! I know of no condition that progresses so speedily or that requires such regular, scientific, conscientious efforts to correct.

If you are just beginning to show the perpendicular lines that are soon going to develop into sunken hollows and criss-cross lines—a three-step treatment will be sufficient to catch the condition "by the heels," correcting the harm that exists and preventing further damage. If, however, the lines have progressed to a point of unattractiveness, you had better count on four or five steps to neck beauty.

In every case, the first step is cleansing. By using a pasteurized cream for the purpose, you receive double action, for it not only cleanses, but invigorates as well.

Next is nourishing. Select the richest anti-wrinkle cream you can buy and put it well into the surface. A gentle, downward, thrust-grasping movement, as illustrated, is effective in smoothing out the lines. Also a light, caressing, patting movement, with slightly cupped palms, as

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"KNOWLEDGE OF FOOD
CALORIES IS NECESSARY
IN REDUCING

You Must Reduce Specially

In order to reduce intelligently, you must have a knowledge of the calories, or energy value, of foods and you must limit your number of calories so that your excess fat is called upon to supply some of your energy needs. The average height person of normal weight, of moderate physical activities, needs approximately 2,200 calories a day. If you cut down 1,000 calories a day—less than 1,200 on the average of one-quarter of a pound a day, or approximately two pounds a week, for you will cause your excess fat to contribute the 1,000 C. And one-quarter of a pound will be used up, for one pound of fat gives off 4,000 calories.

If you can increase your exercise and other physical activities, you need not limit your diet quite so severely, for these also use up calories. If you cannot exercise and can walk, do walk, at least one hour a day, for each hour you walk will use up approximately 200 calories. (You use 100 C. while sitting.) If you walk briskly, you will use up 300 C.

When fat is burned completely in the body, it is broken down to carbon dioxide (which is eliminated by the lungs), and water (which is eliminated through the skin and kidneys). You will probably notice while reducing that you will eliminate more water than usual. Don't be alarmed at this. This is one of the evidences that you are using up your fat. Drink all the water you want. It is not fattening.

Today is the third day that those of you who started after New Year's Day to reduce, have been on your liquid or semi-liquid diet.

Today I am going to give you a day's menu totaling 1,200 C. Meanwhile you should go to a bookstore or library and get a good textbook on dietetics, which gives caloric values of foods, so that you can make out your own menus.

Living and Loving

DAILY LIVING TAKES COURAGE ESPECIALLY
DURING EPIDEMIC

Takes a lot of courage for everyday living, doesn't it, what with the flu flooring the members of one's family one by one? Getting all set for a happy holiday, only to have one or more members of the family circle ill in bed, has been the experience of countless families this year. There is one thing that you must not do, which I presume to say, the blessed doctors may not have stressed, and that is, worry while you're down and out. Make yourself realize that you're not in a normal physical or mental condition and consequently can't see things as they are. Therefore, crush down all tendency to moan, and know positively that when you are on your feet again you'll see your way clear to take care of things, whatever they may be.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am writing to you for advice. I am a girl 16 years of age, am going with a man 65 years of age. He is wealthy. He doesn't mind spending money on me. He wants to marry me. I am staying with my brother. He objects to me marrying him. He says I am too young. Do you think it would be all right or just wait a while?"

"BROWN EYED."
I should consider a man of 65 altogether too old for me to marry no matter how much money he had, Brown Eyed, and I have a son 19. So you can see how big your proposition would go over with me. Thank goodness you have a good brother who is

I think it a splendid opportunity for you and your friends to show how broadminded and really Christian you are. It may be the turning point in this young man's life, and if you help him to overcome the handicap of his common family you may encourage him to make something fine of himself. He already shows he has good stuff in him. Go out with him and ask him to your home and show him every encouragement. You're friends will probably follow your example. It just needs a bit of courage to have everyone take him up. He could go to a larger place, you know, where no one would know of his family, and everyone would take him for what he is, and make much of him.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

IF WISHES WERE GOBBLEBS
Peter laughed—he couldn't help it. Turkey Gobbler did look so determined.

"How are you going to manage to get away?" asked he. "Where are you going to run, and when? I shouldn't think it would be much fun chasing about by yourself."

Turkey Gobbler snorted and shook his wattles, now redder than ever.

"Who said I was going to chase about alone? Did you ever hear of anyone who ran wild all by himself, I should say not. I met a chap in the woods last week and he asked me to join his flock. I'm on my way now."

The boy looked enviously at the Turkey. What fun the old fellow was looking forward to. If only he might go along, he might have a good time as well. Gobbler noticed Peter's expression at once.

"Want to come with me, Boy?" asked he. The boy nodded.

"You just bet I do," he answered, "but where are you going? I don't want to get so far away from home that I can never find my way back, you know."

"Oh, there's no danger of that," declared Turkey Gobbler. "Do you see those mountains over there? Well that is where I am going. That is where the wild Turkeys make their home and by the way, make your mind right away whether you are coming or not, will you? I have just remembered that there is going to be a dance this afternoon and I don't want to miss it. It is getting late now; by sunset very likely it will be all over. Are you coming or aren't you? Come now, speak up."

really is a very moment. But how am I going to reach those mountains before the sun goes down? I haven't such long legs nor such strong ones as you have, Gobbler, and you also have wings to help you out if you should need them."

"I guess I know all that," replied his new friend. "Do you suppose I have not been around you all this while and not noticed you many a time for not being able to use those two arms of yours to mount into the air as you wished to?"

BIBLE TRUTH FOR TODAY

THE GREAT PROCLAMATION—Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world. Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold thy salvation cometh.—Isaiah 62:11.

NEW USE FOR PHOTOGRAPHY

Millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money are spent yearly for carrying on governmental routine. Economics and labor saving have been effected, from time to time through the innovation of bookkeeping and tabulating machines and more efficient filing systems and calculators.

The most recent improvement over old methods is the new system of copying and recording documents by photography. This is now done in a number of states and saves a tremendous amount of time, money and labor, as well as guaranteeing a degree of accuracy impossible with any system of copying by human means.

"This method is no longer in the experimental stage," says the Tax Digest. "It has been tried and found to meet every test. It is superior to any other method that has, as yet, been invented. It is of proven permanency, of demonstrated effectiveness . It is the most economical method. And it is of absolute accuracy."

The copying of documents may seem a small thing, but it is an important duty of government and one that costs a great deal of money. It is through such economies as this that much can be done to raise governmental efficiency and lower the tax rate.

CONVINCING PROOF

No better proof of the essential soundness of the American economic system could be found than the amicability today existing between labor and capital.

At the present time many of the great foreign powers are in the throes of unrest. The Russian Soviet experiment has yet to be worked out satisfactorily and has been chiefly distinguished by conflicts between different Communist factions. England, Austria, Germany and France have labor problems. Government ownership of basic industries has not met the demands of workers, and has damaged national prosperity.

In comparison, the United States stands out, with unparalleled prosperity and industrial satisfaction. Except for coal, major American industries have been free from strikes for years and even minor disputes between employees and employers have been rare.

With growth in wages in our country, millions of workers are purchasing stock in industries which furnish them employment. They will be the capitalists of tomorrow.

Capital has made our prosperity and labor has benefited. And the imported panaceas are found, when brought to America, to be sadly lacking in the qualities that would endear them to our individualistic and independent-thinking citizens.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

POLITICS

The thing that is the matter with politics is not politics, but politicians. And the thing that is the matter with politicians is that too often they are not good men. Too often they are tricky, disloyal, dishonest. It has long been said that the fundamental rule of politics is loyalty—loyalty to your friends. And yet there is probably more disloyalty among politicians than among men in other lines of human endeavor. The professional politician wants most of all to win what he is after. The methods by which he wins are frequently, with him, a minor consideration. With general indifference on one side and the disposition of politicians to be tricky, on the other, the man who really wants to serve the public in an intelligent, honest and high-minded way has a nearly impassable road to travel.

THE TEST

The test of an executive is not his ability to do things, but his ability to attract men and hold men in his organization who know how to do things. Not to be able to pick good men and to fail to keep them happy after they are picked are fatal defects in the character of an executive.

IT'S NOT NEGLECT

A certain weekly newspaper, which at one time attained wide circulation, used to carry at the bottom of the first page the line: "Chronicler of neglected truth." The fact is that truth is not so much the subject of mere neglect as it is a matter of deliberate disregard. There are plenty of books, magazines and newspapers which set forth the truth. There are uncounted thousands who have access to sound reading matter and sound information. But we are still so much creatures of like and dislike, creatures of temperament and instinct, that we prefer avoiding the truth and living in a fool's paradise of our own. We desire to believe what we desire to believe, rather than what we should know and must know to be a fact.

STOCK AND CULTIVATES

More than three times as much cultivated crop land is used for growing feed for farm animals as is used for producing crops for human consumption. As more power driven machinery comes into use that situation will be changed. Driving through the country one wonders how the people are fed when there are so many hungry city folks on uncultivated land on both sides of the road. Hungry city folks can take comfort from the fact, however, that with new and improved methods and more intensive farming, the agriculturist has learned how to produce far more per acre than he used to. There is food enough. The main question now is to see that the producer gets a larger part of the high price that the consumer has to pay. Somewhere along the line the non-producer gets too much.

AS TO CONGRESS

It is usual to find about 60 per cent of the members of congress are lawyers. That may or may not be a desirable situation. A man may be long on the law and short on common sense. He may be long on the law and short on idealistic desire to serve the public by making a real contribution to his times.

The Diary
of a
New Yorker

By WALTER WINCHELL

NEW YORK. — We told Will Rogers that they were saying of him: "Give Will Rogers enough rope and he'll hang anybody."

To which he responded: "Somebody asked me how I get away with kidding big men. I replied that the query answered itself, for I kid only BIG men."

Rogers added that there was little difference between himself and some politicians. "They kid New York," he chirped, "and I kid America."

Then, when some one brought up the subject of how one of the papers he's in, the New York Times, and others, had spunked his wrist because in a radio address he "neglected to say that he wasn't Mr. Coolidge," Rogers moaned: "It sure is gettin' pretty tough for us comedians when we have editorial competition."

HER B'WAY, NOT MINE

Another spurious and hammy version of Broadway is provided at the George M. Cohan theater by George Leffler. It is called "One Way Street" because in the finale a villain is told that he is on a one-way street, from which there is no return. The piece is a blackball to crush the sinners of "the street that whips the universe," and it rebukes the dope traffickers, the blackjacketeers, the naughty ladies of the cabarets, and the rest of us who frequent the Main Stem.

It was written and hastily prepared, one suspects, to quench the thirsts of those who wallowed in the late Mr. Rothstein's activities, but it is rather described as another form of anesthetic.

AND JOHN E. HAZZARD

The musical version of John Kendrick Bungs celebrated satyr, "The Houseboat on the Styx," is being given at the Liberty theater. The night I went a friendly attendance greeted it with no little appreciation. It contains, among other things, some delightful singers and dancers, several settings, a grand comedian named John E. Hazzard, and a robust enough melody or two, but it is only intermittently diverting.

ADD SWELL CRACKS

Whitney Bolton's comment on Mr. Ziegfeld's now hit, "Whoopee": "That's gold in them thar hills!"

Which aroused Fields' girl to audibly inquire: "Who are those common people over there?" "I don't know 'em," he's from, retorted Fields, "but she must be from Heaven!"

IT HAPPENS FOR THE BEST

Her name is Dorothy Jordan. She started her career not long ago in the chorus of "Treasure Girl," a musical show, and soon after was elevated to a small role. Then she was dismissed for no reason or other. The usual pangs that come with anking up and down Heartacre Square followed, but there is a Santa Claus!

Fox just signed her to appear in his "Lispies."

QUITESO! QUITESO!

Lewis E. Gensler, who put on "one of those" musical shows, will tell you that the trouble with this year's theatrical season is that the producers did their Christmas Flopping Early!

If you were in vaudeville, you had to pay them to help fill their theaters. Millions in revenue enrich the managers amount to for this alleged necessary evil, and it was the one sore spot that kept the actors pouting.

Now Mr. Brown has arranged to collect the agents' commissions from the players, charging the agents only a tariff of $5 each week, and the new system does not exact any fee from the actor, who will tell you that the Millennium Has Come!

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"KNOWLEDGE OF FOOD
CALORIES IS NECESSARY
IN REDUCING

You Must Reduce Sanelly

In order to reduce intelligently, you must have a knowledge of the caloric or energy value of foods and you must limit your number of calories so that your excess fat is called upon to supply some of your energy needs. The average height person of normal weight, of moderate physical activities, needs approximately 2,200 calories a day. If you cut down 1,000 calories a day—leaving 1,200 on the average of one-quarter of a pound a day, or approximately two pounds a week, for you will cause your excess fat to contribute the 1,000 C. And one-quarter of a pound will be used up, for one pound of fat gives off 4,000 calories.

If you can increase your exercise and other physical activities, you need not limit your diet quite so much, for these also use up calories, if you cannot exercise and can walk, do calk, at least one hour a day, for each hour you walk will use up approximately 200 calories. (You use 100 C. while sitting.) If you walk briskly, you will use up 300 C.

When fat is burned completely in the body, it is broken down to carbon dioxide (which is eliminated by the lungs), and water (which is eliminated through the skin and kidneys). You will probably notice while reducing that you will eliminate more water than usual. Don't be alarmed at this. This is one of the evidences that you are using up your fat. Drink all the water you want. It is not fattening.

Today is the third day that those of you who started after New Year's Day to reduce, have been on your liquid or semi-liquid diet.

Today I am going to give you a day's menu totaling 1,200 C. Meanwhile you should go to a bookstore or library and get a good textbook on dietetics, which gives caloric values of foods, so that you can make out your own menus.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

DAILY LIVING TAKES
COURAGE ESPECIALLY
DURING EPIDEMIC

Takes a lot of courage for everyday living, doesn't it, what with the flu flooring the members of one's family one by one? Getting all set for a happy holiday, only to have one or more members of the family circle ill in bed, has been the experience of countless families this year. There is one thing that you must not do, which I presume to say, the blessed doctors may not have stressed, and that is, worry while you're down and out. Make yourself realize that you're not in a normal physical or mental condition and consequently can't see things as they are. Therefore, crash down all tendency to moan, and know positively that when you are on your feet again you'll see your way clear to take care of things, whatever they may be.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am writing to you for advice. I am a girl 16 years of age, am going with a man 65 years of age. He is wealthy. He doesn't mind spending money on me. I want to marry him. I am staying with my brother. He objects to me marrying him. He says I am too young. Do you think it would be all right or just wait a while?"

"BROWN EYED." I should consider a man of 65 altogether too old for me to marry no matter how much money he had. Brown Eyed, and I have a son 19. So you can see how I have a proposition would go over with me. Thank goodness you have a good mother who is not blinded by wealth. Sixty-five is not old for a man, but when he wants to marry a little girl of 16 it looks as if he was in his second childhood. Get you a playmate your own age and wait a while and yet another before you think of marrying, is my most earnest advice.

"I think it a splendid opportunity for you and your friends to shine how broadminded and really Christian you are. It may be the turning point in this young man's life, and if you help him to overcome the handicap of his common family you may encourage him to make something fine of himself. He already shows he has good stuff in him. I would tell him and ask him to your home and show him every encouragement. Your friends will probably follow your example. It just needs a bit of courage to have everyone take him up. He could go to a larger place, you know, where no one would know of his family, and everyone would think he had for what he is and make much of him."

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

IF WISHES WERE GOBBLEES

Peter laughed—he couldn't help it. Turkey Gobbler did look so determined.

"How are you going to manage to get away?" asked he. "Where are you going to run, and when? I shouldn't think it would be much fun chasing about by yourself."

Turkey Gobbler snorted and shook his wattle, now redder than ever.

"Who said I was going to chase about alone? Did you ever hear of anyone who ran wild all by himself? I should say not. I met a chap in the woods last week and he asked me to join his flock. I'm on my way now."

The boy looked enviously at the Turkey. What fun the old fellow was looking forward to. If only he might go along he might have a good time as well. Gobbler noticed Peter's expression at once.

"Want to come with me, Boy?" asked he. The boy nodded.

"You just bet I do," he answered. "But where are you going? I don't want to get so far away from home that I can never find my way back, you know."

"Oh, there's no danger of that," declared Turkey Gobbler. "Do you see those mountains over there? Well that is where I am going. That is where the wild Turkey make their home and by the way, make your mind right away whether you are coming or not, will you? I have just remembered that there is going to be a dance this afternoon and I don't want to miss it. It is getting late now; by sunset very likely it will be all over. Are you coming or aren't you? Come now, meet 'em."

ready this very moment. But how am I going to reach those mountains before the sun goes down? I haven't such long legs nor such strong ones as you have Gobbler, and you also have wings to help you out if you should need them.

"I guess I know all that," replied his new friend. "But you suppose I have not been avoiding you all this while and not doing you many a time for not being able to use those two arms of yours to mount into the air? You wished to?"

MERRIWELL FINISH FURNISHES VICTORY IN CLOSING SECONDS

Smittie Sparkles Brilliantly As Locals Come From Behind To Win; Free Shots Give Xenia Margin Over Visiting Five.

By PHIL FRAME

CONTINUING their winning ways, Xenia Central High School's "Buccaneers" rose to dizzy heights to notch out their third straight victory of the season—a breath-taking 30 to 28 win over Columbus East High School at the Central gym Saturday night.

Apparently beaten, the E's staged one of their famous whirlwind finishes to overcome a three-point advantage and triumph in the last sixty seconds of play.

East High, as a result of some uncanny shooting by its forward pair, Captain Burke and Clossen, flashed a remarkable attack in the opening quarter, leading 11 to 5 at the end of the first period.

The Xenia sharpshooters began making the basket with more regularity from the foul line and from the field in the second session and at the end of the first half had not only overhauled the visitors but only outscored 12 to 16. East was outscored 12 to 5 in this period.

The Bucs pyramided their advantage to seven points in the third quarter but before the period ended East had reduced Xenia's margin to 24 to 22. Each team registered six points in the final quarter but the Bucs won out through a furious finish.

East presented a smooth passing combination and a fast-breaking offense that had the Bucs in hot water much of the time, especially in the first quarter.

Xenia had forty-six shots at the basket, thirty-five short shots and eleven from long range. Columbus obtained fifty-four shots, twenty-eight from within the foul line and twenty-six from a longer distance.

Xenia, 1927-28 Miami Valley League court champions, will open its league season against Sidney here Friday night, January 11. Lineups and summary:

JUNIOR HIGH STILL GOING GREAT; WINS FRO MBWERSVILLE

Playing its second game in as many days, Central Junior High School basketball team remained undefeated this season by trimming Bowersville Junior High 15 to 4 in a rather lopsided basketball game preliminary to the Xenia-Columbus East contest Saturday night at Central gym.

Presumably tired from the hard game at Waynesville the preceding evening, Central Juniors played a sluggish game and were off color in basket shooting. Nevertheless, Bowersville was unable to penetrate the Central defense with any degree of consistency.

Mutenpaw was hit-point guard of the contest, the central Junior center razing up three baskets and two fouls. Bowers was runner-up followed by Flory, the former with four points and the latter with three. Davis looked best for the visitors. Lineups:

SPORT SHOTS

FRAMED BY PHIL

George L. "Tex" Rickard, sports promoter extraordinary, is dead.

Tex, who made champions and also fortunes for everybody but himself, died with his "boots on." He was stricken in Miami, Fla., while engaged in promoting an athletic event, something for which he had become famous throughout the world.

His death, which occurred suddenly Sunday morning following an operation for appendicitis performed New Year's Day, was as much of a shock as it was unexpected to his thousands of admirers who had been led to believe he was well along the road to recovery.

Only two days ago Rickard, a sportsman first, last and always, told Jack Dempsey, the fighter who attained greatest fame under his promotion, that he "had this fight licked."

After being a cow puncher, gambler and gold prospector, Tex in middle age turned to sports promotion and achieved not only success, but international fame and to a certain extent, wealth.

Always known as a "square shooter," Rickard's promotion activities attracted little attention over the country until he staged the sporting world of the Joe Gans landing and staging the Joe Gans-Nelson fight for Goldfield, Nev., and offered the unheard-of purse of $32,000 for a lightweight battle to be pulled off in the far west hundreds of miles from any city of consequence.

Financially, the venture was a success far beyond Rickard's dreams as it drew a "gate" in excess of $69,000. Maybe it was "beginner's luck," but in any event that fight started Tex on a career of promotion and his rise in this particular sphere was meteoric thereafter.

He offered one record-breaking purse after another, was the first promoter and the last for that matter, to obtain a "million dollar gate," and he staged progressively more important fights of national importance in the last eighteen years.

The question has sometimes been asked: What was the cause of Rickard's unusual success? The answer is not hard to find. In the first place, Rickard knew human nature. He knew what the sporting public wanted, and he would pay unheard-of prices to see—and he always gave value received.

He never hesitated to take a chance and invariably was where his promoting ventures were concerned.

At the start the public was inclined to be skeptical of Rickard. He was generally believed to be insane to offer such lucrative purses. With the last few years, however, Gus H. Pan has refused to be started by Rickard's million dollar gates and purses of half a million dollars. You see the fans had learned to expect big things from Tex and so whatever he promoted never came as a surprise.

Luck was with Rickard in his outdoor fights. He was almost always favored by good weather. His success in staging fights on nights when fair weather prevailed was uncanny. Seldom were his bouts postponed because of inclement weather. Therefore his profits did not dwindle.

It is now a question of finding a man to fill his shoes. At present there does not seem to be any worthy of the name of his successor. However, however, someone will come along before long.

There is now some talk that Dempsey will try to fill the bill. Jack called Rickard the best he ever had. "No doubt he is right. Without Rickard's help, Dempsey might still be an obscure fighter."

Dempsey, if he turned fight promoter, would have one thing in his favor. His name and reputation as a fighter. He might lack Rickard's shrewdness and other characteristics which went to make him the greatest man in his particular field of all time. He would face the task of building up a confidence in himself that fighters and the public alike always had in Tex. Nevertheless, he may do it.

Luis Angel Firpo, Buenos Aires, Argentina, heavyweight boxer: "Tex Rickard was all man. His letters were real sources of inspiration and were what made me most want to return to the ring."

William Muldoon, New York state boxing commissioner: "Boxing has lost one of its real friends, a man who did much to stabilize and improve the sport, and a fine, honest gentleman."

Mayor James J. Walker: "In the sad death of Tex Rickard, New York City loses one of its foremost citizens, whom we all admired as a man and as a promoter of clean athletic contests."

Benny Leonard, retired lightweight champion: "In business a man can be replaced, but Rickard cannot be replaced. He was an institution, a public idol in boxing."

CEDARVILLE COL LEGE DEFEATS OHIO NORTHERN ON SATURDAY

Making almost every shot count, the Cedarville College "Yellow Jackets" routed Ohio Northern University 41 to 29 in a basketball game at Ada, O., Saturday night.

The half ended with Cedarville leading, 18 to 16, but in the second half Coach Marvin Borst's boys looped them in from all angles and went far into the lead. The Northerners displayed excellent floorwork, but their shots failed to connect much of the time.

A fine defense and brilliant basket-shooting broke down Ohio Northern's teamwork and allowed Cedarville to forge ahead to a substantial win.

Allen was high-point man of the contest, the stellar Cedarville forward registering seven baskets and four fouls for eighteen points. Smith, lanky center, came second, with twelve markers. Monnot, Northerner guard, topped his team with eight points and Long, center, contributed six.

Cedarville will meet Rio Grande at Gallipolis, O., Thursday night and a hard game is anticipated. Lineups and summary:

LET'S LIVE! MILDRED LAMB

© 1928, CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. INC.

READ THIS FIRST:

Byrd Browning, brought up in a small town, was trying to adapt himself to her fast-moving, magnetic, young husband, Larry, but she soon discovered that Jack Duncan, his business associate, was plunging him into debt instead of making him rich as he promised.

Larry's friends were lively and spendthrift, and Larry, too, was spending his entire income, even the large sums he was continually borrowing from Mr. Hamilton, Byrd's father, on useless extravagance and on India Campbell, a former sweetheart of Larry's, who "borrowed" from everybody.

Pat, Byrd's young sister who lived with them in their small, expensive apartment, intoxicated with city life, started a pace of her own. Finally Byrd bought a house without Larry's knowledge and paid $1,000 down on it, out of the last loan. Tiny and Fred Oberman admired her courage and approved.

Larry approved of the purchase of the house and he and Byrd spent the entire day buying furniture and furnishings, charging everything to the new accounts which he opened.

They moved into the new house, and before it was settled, Larry's friends began making it their rendezvous.

Byrd engaged Mandy, a colored maid, to help her with the housework. Her mother wired her that she was arriving for a visit.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLII

Byrd and her mother were driving to the house from the station. "Oh, moms," said Byrd, eagerly, "I do hope you'll like the house—and—Mandy."

"Who is Mandy?" asked her mother in an ominous tone.

Byrd steeled herself against the criticism she knew was about to descend upon her head. She and her father had never been able to please her mother while the better-skilled Pat and the drab Becky, her older sister, who made no effort at all to do all the things that their mother demanded of them, were able to manage her better.

Byrd told her. "Land sakes," Mrs. Hamilton cried, "what in creation's name do you need hired help for? Aren't you strong enough to keep house for two people?"

Her thin lips curled shut with a decision already formed behind them, to straighten out this extravagant daughter.

"I can't understand you flibbert-gibbet girls of today. All you think of is spending money. You never think of helping your husband get some where, but drive him like a slave until he drops in his tracks or you get into the divorce courts."

Byrd brushed her hand over her mouth to conceal the smile that momentarily twinkled in the corners of her mouth.

Her mother had nagged her faithfully for her life. He had never objected to anything she did. He urged her to travel and buy clothes and things for the house. All he wanted was to be left alone. It was because he was the kindest man in the world, with a backbone as hard and straight as an oak, that she hadn't broken him.

As Byrd took her mother through the house, she commented acidly on the foolishness of sun parlors and breakfast alcoves and the ridiculous size of closets that were built into the new houses. The only things she really liked about the house were the two lovely old chairs, one in the front yard and the other in the back.

"The fool builder probably cut down half a dozen more," she said, grudgingly. "It doesn't look to me as if this house is going to last your life time."

She was examining the foundation with disapproval in her eye. "If you'd cut down on the luxuries, maids and washing machines, and all your other contraptions, you might have put more money into the house and got your money's worth," she continued.

She walked about the yard in her hat of last year's vintage—to be kind to the hat—a high-towered affair that gave her an embattled look, like a tall warrior leading against the enemy.

When they were sitting in the living room, her mother began to question Byrd about Pat.

Byrd had reluctantly agreed with Pat to let their mother believe that she was going to business college.

"You got to stick to the story you told dad," insisted Pat. "You know what'll happen to me if moms knows I'm working in a department store—she'll yank me home so fast I won't know what's happening to me."

"I'm certainly glad that that crazy Patricia has settled down to something serious for once in her life," her mother was saying grimly in his denial.

Mrs. Hamilton regarded Mandy with hostile eyes. She had come purposely to teach Byrd how to cook and manage a house, and she hadn't wanted any interference.

But Mandy's ancestors hadn't played up to the white race during years of slavery for nothing.

In twenty-four hours Mandy had Mrs. Hamilton wrapped around her little black finger.

"Mandy pretends to agree with her," Byrd giggled to Pat, "and is completely lost in amazed admiration over everything she tells her."

All day long, Mrs. Hamilton gave infinite instructions on kitchen technique and economy intended for Byrd's ears as well as Mandy's.

"I always use half butter and half lard when I'm baking cakes," she said to Mandy. "They're really richer."

"Yes'm," agreed Mandy, "that's jes' what I always does, too."

"Oh, what a waste that one was!" whispered Pat to Byrd, as they were eating their breakfast. Mrs. Hamilton had had hers at six o'clock.

"If you pour off the coffee that's left over, you can use it up with the next batch."

"Now ain't that a idea!" Mandy would exclaim.

"Put all the left-over pieces of soap into a jar and it makes good shampoo, or if it's yellow soap, for the kitchen. It's extravagant to use white for dishwashing—keep it for scrubbing rugs."

Mandy would regard her with wonder. "I always put a little piece of veal in my chicken salad and no one's the wiser."

"When you make angel food, add two tablespoons of water. It saves three whites."

The best cooks are the most economical," Byrd said in Mandy's ear, as she carried their plates to the kitchen.

Mrs. Hamilton and Mandy canned and preserved and pickled in the mornings, and in the afternoons, she plunked poor Mandy out on the back steps to sew rags for rugs. Mrs. Hamilton had thought to bring a lot of worn-out gingham with her for this purpose.

"They're wonderful for the bare spots," Mrs. Hamilton said, foretelling, to Mandy, like a sergeant addressing a raw recruit.

"Yes'm," replied Mandy, humbly.

One day Byrd and Mrs. Hamilton went into town for lunch, and while Mrs. Hamilton shopped, Byrd stepped in to see Progress Polk.

She wanted his advice. "She told him about Larry's buy-sell plan," Byrd said, and Sumner Point stocks, and her own futile efforts to make Jack take them back.

"Every morning I wake up with the feeling that before the end of the day they may not be worth the paper they're printed on," said Byrd, with lines of worry etched deeply into her fine, white forehead.

Progress was worried, too. "They're certainly ugly reports all over town about it," he elaborated her worst fears. "My opinion is that Jack Duncan's liable to arrest any moment."

"What can we do about it?" asked Byrd, distractedly.

"I'll threaten him a little and see if I can't get him to take them back," said Progress.

"Oh, I'll be so grateful!" said Byrd, with a little catch in her voice.

Byrd was debating whether she dared to express her fears regarding the Builders' Supply stock, but she decided it was not loyal to go about discussing one's husband's integrity.

"Mr. Polk knows us too well not to warn me if Larry's doing something unethical," thought Byrd. "I know it's all right. Chet bought some."

When Pat came down to dinner that night, she was dressed to go out.

"How in the world can you study hard all day and gallivant around all night?" Mrs. Hamilton demanded.

"Moms, you always forget that you used to tear around when you were a girl," chafed Pat. "Now less up, didn't you?"

"Never," Mrs. Hamilton's whole manner beamed the sinister charge of frivolity. "When I was a girl—"

"You were dead from the neck up, and probably from the—" began Pat, with a touch of venom.

"Pat!" reprimanded Byrd, sharply. "Let her go!" said Mrs. Hamilton to Byrd. "Some day I'll probably be saying, 'I told you so!' to the young lady!" and Mrs. Hamilton's eyes shot sparks at her youngest daughter.

"Pat gone out with that awful Eddie?" he exclaimed, in surprise. "Why, the little baggage had a date with moi!"

"What she sees in that Eddie I don't know," said Byrd, as Chet prepared to spend the evening with her, "but she and India have been having a death struggle over him, and now that he belongs to Pat again, they're once more on speaking terms."

"I've got to discipline that kid," said Chet, gravely.

"I wish you'd try it," Byrd laughed. Then her face sobered. "Chet, I never could understand how you happened to buy Builders' Supply stock when you disapproved of it so thoroughly."

Chet looked embarrassed and gave a funny, weak laugh.

"Well, if you'll forgive my candor, Byrd," he began, "I tell for Larry's stock like a good many other suckers are falling for it. You know he's a darn clever salesman, and I got roped in, that's all."

"I'll never dream that staid bankers would fall for stocks that their intelligence warned them against," said Byrd, slyly.

"I haven't been a banker very long. Maybe that's why," grinned Chet.

"Here comes mother," Byrd lowered her voice. "She thinks you'd make an ideal son-in-law. She says you're sober, industrious and solid."

Chet let out a whoop at this, but stifled it as Mrs. Hamilton came into the living room. Chet drew up a chair for her.

Chet visited with Mrs. Hamilton all evening. Byrd listened, and occasionally yawned, but Chet stayed on. He looked at her occasionally with a sly side-long glance.

"That's a very sensible young man," said Mrs. Hamilton when Chet had left. "And I can't see what Pat sees in that other young fellow."

EXPECT YOUTH WILL BE INDICTED AFTER ARREST IN CHICAGO

Indictments for disposing of mortgaged property and issuing fraudulent checks were expected to be returned Monday by the Warren County grand jury against John Cron, 21, Lebanon, O., who was arrested in Chicago, Ill., and returned to Lebanon early last November by Oliver Helden, Greene County Auto Club secretary.

Prior to his capture in Chicago, Cron had eluded arrest for nine months.

According to Secretary Bolden, Cron is charged with having mortgaged a Whippet coach with the Waynesville Overland Sales, Waynesville, O., for $380 and then disappeared. He drove the machine all over the country and finally sold it in Kansas City, Mo. Bolden learned Auto club officials are attempting to trace the car.

It is also charged that the youth defrauded the sales agency by passing a worthless check for $5. His parents living in Lebanon have since made restitution for a bad check for $10 passed on a Lebanon merchant, according to Bolden.

The Greene County Auto Club took an interest in the case because Lebanon is included in this district, it is said.

She and her father had never been able to please her mother while the helter-skelter Pat and the drab Becky, her older sister, who made no effort at all to do all the things that their mother demanded of them, were able to manage her better.

Byrd told her, "Land sakes," Mrs. Hamilton cried, "what in creation's name do you need hired help for? Aren't you strong enough to keep house for two people?"

Her thin lips clicked shut with a decision already formed behind them, to straighten out this extraneous thing.

"I can't understand you flibbertigibbet girls of today. All you think of is spending money. You never think of helping your husband get some where, but drive him like a slave until he drops in his tracks or you get into the divorce courts."

Byrd brushed her hand over her mouth to conceal the smile that momentarily welked in the corners of her mouth.

Her mother had nagged her faithfully all her life. He had never objected to anything she did. He urged her to travel and buy clothes and things for the house. All he wanted was to be left alone. It was because he was the kindest man in the world, with a backbone as hard and straight as an oak, that she hadn't broken him.

As Byrd told her mother through the house, she commented acidly on the foolishness of son parlor and breakfast alcoves that were built into the new houses. The only things she really liked about the house were the two lovely old elms, one in the front yard and the other in the back.

"The fool builder probably cut down half a dozen more," she said, grudgingly. "It doesn't look to me as if this house is going to last your life time."

She was examining the foundation with disapproval in her eye. "If you'd cut down on the luxuries, maids and washing machines, and all your other contraptions, you might have put more money into the house and got your money's worth," she continued.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Oglesbee and their daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Therman Oglesbee and daughter of Dayton and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Pond and son Max of Bloomington, were the Sunday guests of Mr. Jacob Oglesbee.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. and family have moved to Harveysburg.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lieberman spent Christmas in Dayton with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fleisher and daughter Mary Ellen.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman Hiett and family were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Hiett and family Christmas Day.

Mr. Rufus Wile and family are moving into the property vacated by the Roush family.

Mr. and Mrs. Milo Fields spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Adam Prosser and family of near Ellettsville.

Mrs. Maria Michener of Columbus spent Christmas and the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Michener and family and her son Dickie.

When they were sitting in the living room, her mother began to question Byrd about Pat.

Byrd had reluctantly agreed with Pat to let their mother believe that she was going to business college.

"You got to stick to the story you told dad," insisted Pat. "You know what'll happen to me if mom knows I'm working in a department store—she'll yank me home so fast I won't know what's happening to me."

"I'm certainly glad that that crazy Patricia has settled down to something serious for once in her life," her mother was saying grimly.

Mrs. Hamilton regarded Mandy with hostile eyes.

She had come purposely to teach Byrd how to cook and manage a house, and she hadn't wanted any interference.

But Mandy's ancestors hadn't played up to the white race during years of slavery for nothing.

In twenty-four hours Mandy had Mrs. Hamilton wrapped around her little black finger.

"Mandy pretends to agree with her," Byrd giggled to Pat, "and is completely lost in amazed admiration over everything she tells her."

All day long, Mrs. Hamilton gave infinite instructions on kitchen technique and economy intended for Byrd's ears as well as Mandy's.

"I always use half butter and half lard when I'm baking cakes," she said to Mandy. "They're really richer."

"Yas'm," agreed Mandy, "that's jes' what I always does, too."

"Oh, what a waste that one was!" whispered Pat to Byrd, as they were eating their breakfast. Mrs. Hamilton had had hers at six o'clock.

"If you pour off the coffee that's left over, you can use it up with the next batch."

"Now about that idea!" Mandy would exclaim.

"Put all the left-over pieces of soap into a jar and it makes good shampoo, or if it's yellow soap, for the kitchen—disinfecting—keep it for scrubbing rugs."

Mandy would regard her with wonder.

"I always put a little piece of yeast in my chicken salad and no one's the wiser," she said.

"When you make angel food, add two tablespoons of water. It saves three whites."

"The best cooks are the most economical," Byrd said in Mandy's ear, as she carried their plates to the kitchen.

Mrs. Hamilton and Mandy canned and preserved and pickled in the mornings, and in the afternoon, she planned poor Mandy out on the back steps to sew rags for rags.

Mrs. Hamilton had thought to bring a lot of worn-out gingham with her for this purpose.

"They're wonderful for the bare spots," Mrs. Hamilton said, forcefully, to Mandy, like a sergeant directing a new recruit.

"Yas'm," replied Mandy, humbly.

One day Byrd and Mrs. Hamilton went into town for lunch, and while Mrs. Hamilton shopped, Byrd stepped in to see Progress Polk.

She told him about Larry's buying the Hillandale and Sunset Point stocks, and her own futile efforts to make Jack take them back.

"Every morning I wake up with the feeling that before the end of the day they may not be worth the price of her mouth."

"Pat gone out with that awful Eddie!" he exclaimed, in surprise. "Why, the little baggage had a date with me!"

"What she sees in that Eddie I don't know," said Byrd, as Chet prepared to spend the evening with her, "but she and India have been having a death struggle over him, and now that he belongs to Pat again, they're once more on speaking terms."

"I've got to discipline that kid," said Chet, gravely.

"I wish you'd try it," Byrd laughed. Then her face sobered. "Chet, I never could understand how you happened to buy Builders' Supply stock when you disapproved of it so thoroughly."

Chet looked embarrassed and gave a funny, weak laugh.

"Well, if you'll forgive my candor, Byrd," he began, "I fell for Larry's stock like a good many other suckers are falling for it. You know he's a darn clever sales man, and I got roped in, that's all."

"I'd never dream that staid bankers would fall for stocks that their intelligence warned them against," said Byrd, slyly.

"I haven't been a banker very long, maybe that's why," grinned Chet.

"Here comes mother," Byrd lowered her voice. "She thinks you'd make an ideal son-in-law. She says you're sober, industrious and 'solid.'"

Chet let out a whoop at this, but stifled it as Mrs. Hamilton came into the living room. Chet drew up a chair for her.

Chet visited with Mrs. Hamilton all evening. Byrd listened, and occasionally yawned, but Chet stayed on. He looked at her occasionally with a sly side-glance.

"That's a very sensible young man," said Mrs. Hamilton when Chet had left. "And I can't see what Pat sees in that other young fellow."

The Theater

Unlike Urbana and other cities of similar size, Xenians are not responding to plans for a "little theater" here. This is evidenced in the small financial return, following the issue of tickets for the proposed season of 1929.

Xenians don't have to be drilled with the hackneyed lesson that "nothing can be accomplished without money." But the "little theater" organization is no exception to that rule.

It is realized that the question is in the minds of many: "What are we to get for our money? What progress has been made by the organization?" Just as the financial Rehearsals have begun on the first play, with a capable cast selected. The cast includes such well-known thespians as Mrs. Lawrence Shields, Mrs. Charles Adair, Miss Estlin Smith, Miss Elsie Canby, Miss Alice Foley, Harry A. Higgins, Charles A. Bone, Harry E. Kiernan and others.

A number of Xenians have long expressed a desire for a theater organization here. With this idea in mind, a group organized last spring and laid plans for a membership drive and mid-winter performances. It was firmly believed that the organization would be worthwhile with the co-operation of the general public. If this co-operation is not obtained immediately, plans for the "little theater" in Xenia must be abandoned.

response of citizens awaits definite action of the organization, so does the organization await money whereby to further its plans. One is vitally important to the other.

However, the organization believes it has accomplished much in the way of gaining the moral support of the community, issuing tickets to "members" with plans of a season of four performances at a nominal figure, to begin as soon as sufficient money was obtained and beginning work on a play that should attract local theater-goers.

Tickets were offered at $2.50 each, making the fee for each performance less than seventy-five cents. Surely no one acquainted with the work and necessary ability to stage a performance, could complain of such a nominal fee.

Of the 160 letters, most of which contained two tickets, sent out to Xenians, about seventy dollars have been received. The remainder, due no doubt to the rush of the holiday season, has failed to send in their money.

BEAM IS PRESIDENT OF COMMISSIONERS

Commissioner A. E. Beam was elected president of the Greene County Commissioners for 1929 at the board's annual organization meeting Monday morning. He succeeds Commissioner Herman Eavey, who has served in that capacity for the last four or five years.

Second four-year terms of Commissioners Beam and J. Harve Lackey became effective Monday, while Commissioner Eavey's second four-year term does not expire for two more years.

Their 1928 Marriages "Didn't Take"

Romances of many famous screen stars went on the rocks in the twelvemonth just passed. Louise Brooks, pert flapper of the films, was divorced from A. E. Sutherland, director. Helene Costello was freed from John Y. Reagan; Jacqueline Logan was awarded a decree from Robert Gillespie; Dorothy Mackaill and Lother Mendes, director, were separated by the courts; Madge Bellamy and Logan F. Metcalf, broker, called it quits, and so did Blanche Mehafeff, who told a judge that George J. Hansen, his game hunter, was "too unkind" for a domestic life.

SEVENTY-SIX GIVEN DIVORCE DECREES DURING YEAR 1928

Greene Countians stand a better chance of escaping the divorce court if they have children. The percentage is only 39 per cent.

Of seventy-six decrees granted in Common Pleas Court in 1928, 61 per cent of the couples had no children, although the remaining 39 per cent added forty-nine children to the throng of legal orphans. During the year, fifty-three women and twenty-three men were awarded divorces. Forty-five couples had no children and forty-nine children were involved in the remaining thirty-one cases.

Two wives were granted a divorce for every man who obtained a legal separation.

Gross neglect of duty led in causes for divorce having been named as grounds forty-three times, with cruelty second, listed twenty-five times. Wilful absence from home for more than three years brought three decrees, infidelity, two, fraud, two, and confinement of the husband in the state penitentiary, one.

Trebein Resident Can Now Eat Anything He Wants—Brief Treatment of Konjola Relieved Illness of Months

Gallagher drug store, 33 E. Main St., Xenia, is the recipient of many happy testimonials as to the quick and complete effectiveness of this wonder-working remedy.

"It is too good to be true," joyously exclaimed Mr. W. C. Early, R. F. D. No. 7, Trebein, near Xenia a few days ago. "For several years, my stomach caused me intense pains. There were many foods I could not eat at all, and the few items left caused bloating, gas, and shortness of breath. Physicians failed to give relief. I tried no end of medicine but without help, and I was discouraged.

"When I heard of Konjola—although the reports of its success were glowing—I was dubious. I kept on suffering, and finally made up my mind to see if there was any virtue in the new medicine. The result was as delightful as surprising. With the very first bottle, my appetite returned, my stomach resumed its natural activities, bloating and gas disappeared, and I was able to sleep all through the night. Something I had not been able to do for months.

"I have gone on with the treatment and have now taken three bottles of this amazing compound. The result is that I am enjoying health I have not known for years. Truly Konjola has been a life-saver for me, and I recommend it to all who suffer as I did through hopeless months."

What Konjola did for Mr. Early, it has done for countless others, and you, too, will find relief from suffering, no matter of what duration, if you will just give Konjola the opportunity to restore the afflicted organs to cleanse your system of the poisons that are bringing misery. The new medicine contains no heart-depressing drugs; no ingredients that give momentary relief by deadening the nerves. Konjola reaches the very source of the ailment; its action is quick and permanent. You owe it to yourself to learn all about Konjola now—today. You need not suffer.

Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallagher drug store, 33 E. Main St., and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

FEWER VIOLENT DEATHS IN 1928

Safety first was more of a reality in Greene County in 1928 than in the preceding year.

Ten less inquiries were conducted by Coroner Frank M. Chambliss in 1928 than in 1927 and there were fewer accidental and violent deaths recorded.

Records reveal that the coroner held forty-one formal inquiries in 1928 as compared with fifty-one the previous twelve months.

During 1928 there were four suicides, eight persons were fatally hurt in auto accidents, one death resulted from acute alcoholism, one was murdered, one killed by a bull, one died of burns and eleven other deaths were from accidental reasons. The remainder were attributed to natural causes.

POSTAL RECEIPTS DECREASE DURING 1928 SAYS REPORT

Business transacted by the Xenia Post Office during 1928 is valued at $48,657.12 by Postmaster C. S. Frazer in his annual report listing postal receipts for the entire year. This amount, the report shows, is $191 less than 1927.

Receipts were derived from the following sources: $15,270.25 from sale of paper and stamps; $2,169.72 from newspapers carried through the mails; $894.19 for mail matter sent with permits; $359.15 from box rent and $27.81 miscellaneous.

Postmaster Frazer's report for December, 1928, shows the income of the post office amounted to $6,162.97 as compared with $6,231.03 in the corresponding month in 1927, a decrease of $68.06.

In reality the post office transacted a larger volume of business and handled more packages than in the same month in the preceding year, but the revenue diminished because of a new regulation reducing newspaper rates and in taking out permits. It is estimated the department lost $200 through matter mailed with permits, also a new regulation.

The postmaster announced that receipts in December far exceed any other month of the year because of the tremendous Christmas business. He asserted the holiday rush was greater in December, 1928 than in December, 1927.

THIRD ALARM

Grease burning on a gas range in a room on the second floor of the Lavey Apts., 112 N. Detroit St., at 8:05 a. m. Sunday resulted in a summons for the fire department. There was no damage. The alarm was the third so far this year.

CLOTHIERS MERGE

Baker Company, one of Toledo's leading retailers of men's clothing, becomes a unit in one of the country's largest clothing combines by the merger of the Fashion Park Company and the Weber-Hellbrouser Company. The combine is assured, it was said, of annual retail sales of $50,000,000 a year.
